At the General Hospital, Shanghai, on the 15th September, 1886, Joseph Garbogur, late Master of the etermer Marcia, agod 35 years.

Hongkong, September 22nd, 1386. ME. MACEWEN'S crusade against the Government on behalf of the squatters at Lapsapwan has caused no little surprise in the colony. The camp was a nest of lawless characters, and the only fault that can ressonably be found with the authorities in the matter is that they were too indulgent. deed, the squatters might almost be excused if they had come to believe that Government warnings and threats meant nothing and would never be enforced. If any similar ease should arise in the future it would be advisable for the Government, in addition to notifying the people by word of mouth, to post a written proclamation in the camp, bearing the proper official seal. The notice given should then be fully executed on the day named, instead of allowing repeated and indefinite extensions of time. As to the character of the population recently gathered together at Lapsapwan, it is clearly shown in the correspondence laid on the Council table. The Police report that while the women of the willage appeared to work bard feeding pigs, the greater number of the men wandered about the city in search of plunder, and one particular gang of robbers were living in the village for about nine months, until some of them were arrested. The Afforestation Department also report that great damage has been done to the plantations by the depredations of the squatters. It appears, further, that tion, and that they were keeping pigs without licences, for which they were liable to prosecution. On every ground, therefore, their removal was desirable in the public interest, No injustice can be alleged in the matter, seeing that the occupants of the camp do not belong to the colony, but are Hikkas from the mainland, who simply availed of the | doqui, late master of the steamer Marcia, which ocopportunity of establishing themselves in a locality where they thought they could carry on their combined pursuits of pig breeding Previously he was chief officer of the steamer and robbery with immunity from taxation and supervision. One man, it appears, carried He was much respected by a large circle of on the manufacture of tooth powder, a business which ought certainly to enable bim to pay rates on the same scale as residents be discouraged where it can be carried on under auitable conditions. It is desirable also that the whole of the small area of cultivable land there is in the colony should be worked. It does not follow, however, that squatters are to be allowed to flock into the colony and settle wherever they like with law as to licences, etc. On the contrary. supervision should be maintained over them. As to the squatters at Lapscowen, we believe attempt to go any further just then."

the respectable Chinese population fully approve of the action taken by the Government, as they hold that the persons evicted belong to a class whom it is by no means desirable to encourage in the colony. Respectable hard working squatters ought to be wel comed by the Government where there is room for them-and regulations might so framed that only respectable people would care to accept the conditions-but own treasury. somi-criminal acttlement such as that at Lapsapwan ought not to have been tolerated even for the time it was. We fully concur Orders may be sent to Daily Press Office, where | with the Acting Governor when he says that these people "are entitled to no compensation, and it would be a most impolition action to grant them any compensation es swarms of their countrymen to come over from Kwangtung and do as they have done; settle down on Crown land without permission, and then, when either Government wanted to use the ground or utter disregard of all sanitary rules rondered their removal necessary, expect be compensated for removing." The experience gained in connection with Lapsapwan affair will probably put the Government on its guard against allowing any similar nuisance to grow up in the future. The camp was a standing menace

> We have received a copy of M. French Sheldon's English translation of Flaubert's celebrated romance "Salammbo," a work which created an immense sensation when it appeared in Paris some twenty-five years ago. The scene is laid in ancient Carthage, and the events turn on the siege of that city by the disbanded mercenaries who had assisted Hamilcar, the father of Hanniba in his operations in Sicily.' Salammbo is the daughter of Hemilcar, and is beloved by Matho, the chief of the merconaries. The story is thus made up of passionate love and flerce warfare, and is narrated in language the realism of which astonished the world when the tale first apseared. We have since become better account omed to realism, but some of the passages i Salanimbo may well startle even the precent day reader. The word painting is in many par gorgeous, the effect being produced by a few bold strokes and vivid colouring: in other parts it is simple horrible, and calculated to give the reader a feeling of nausea. There was much in Carthage which would be distasteful to modern ideas, but with the same realistic effect as the beautiful

He stated the nature of the charge, and he said the facts he should prove against the prisoner were very simple. He should first of all prove that on the 28th July last Belran, by means of a forged bill of exchange, obtained from the Churtered Bank of India, Australia, and China about $30,000. He should prove that on that day the prisoner and Beltran both went to Macao. in company, in the same steamer. On that very day also; the 25th July, he should prove that the risoner handed over to someone at Macao a box containing $17,750 in notes. He should also prove that about the middle of July the prisoner consulted a fortune teller as to whether one Pedro would succeed in obtaining money from a ank by means of a paper, and that the Chinese fortune teller told him the attempt would successful, but that there would be great trouble afterwards. Upon these facts being proved he

He then left, telling me he was going to Hongkong, and he left the box behind in my house. On Thursday, the 5th August, I saw the prisoner again in my house. Mr. Leach-I submit, my Lord, that there no case whatever to go before a charge against the prisoner is recaiving the mm of $17.750 from P. R. Beltran well knowing that it had been obtained by means of a forgery. To a charge of that sort there are three essentials. First of all is necessary to prove the forgery by which I the money is alleged to have been obtained in the information. I ask your Lordship what avidence there has been of that? There is not a tittle of evidence that the money mentioned in this information was received by the prisoner at the bar. There is also not a tittle of evidence to show whether the money in the prisoner's possession was received by him at Hongkong or Macao. The prosecution has not attempted to show it, and the only suggestion that could be made in this case is because a certain sum of money was found in a box: but if your Lordship of opinion that that money was in the prisoner's ossession was there anything to show that it had been obtained from the Bank by means of this forgery? The money has not been identified, and there has been no attempt to identify it. There is no evidence to show that he was wandering about with this $17,000 in his possession, and there is no evidence to show that the amount contained in this box was not his own property. There is not a tittle of evidence to show it was received by him from Beltrau. His Lordship—I do not see how you can expect me to stop the case. These two men seem to have had some intimate relations one with another: they were together at the time this money was obtained, according to the evidence before the jury. They went to Macso together that day, and the same day the prisoner lodged a box ontaining $17.750 in the house of the man da Silva there. Whether that is sufficient to conviot him or not is a different question. It seems to me that there is a case for you to meet. Mr. Leach then addressed the jury for the lefence. He asked them, in the first place, to dismiss from their minds anything they might have heard outside the court, any facts stated in the newspaper, which had reported the case somewhat fully; but to deal with the case simply becalg need bad doing ecceptive att of guidecos before them. They had not to deal with procabilities or with suspicious circumstances, or with anything of that sort, but with the case as it was disclosed to them by the evidence. In the first place, assuming, as he supposed they would i Camoens. I told him about the box and asked him the money, as alleged, by means of a forgory, was whether the evidence did not show that that there a tittle of a vidence to show that there was any was found in the prisoner's box? Though the evidence against him was, perhaps, strong, there the prisoner in a box in that way, and left with wasnothing to show that the prisoner had anything da Silva at Macao with no special directions? If to do with that money. The only evidence was it were his own money would be have lett it in that on the 29th July he and Beltran were together in Wellington-street, and that afterwards Silva? It was a question for the jury whether id not go on board this boat together, and there was nothing to show there was anything in the also questionable whether the richest man in fact of their both going to Macso that day more han a mere coincidence. The more fact of their onversing over their tiffin on beard the steamer was nothing. Being friends that was what one would naturally expect them to do. Why had the prosecutor not asked the watchmen on board the steamer whether either the prisoner or Beltran had brought anything on board with them No such question had been asked and bethought he was entitled to assume that the question not been asked because they were afraid to putit There was no evidence that they anything on board the steamer. even possible that Beltran might have had the money upon him at that time, but that did not connect the prisoner with it in any way. evidence as to their being together from the commencement was quite uncorroborated, and again, the evidence of the man do Silva as to the prisoner leaving the box with him at Macao was entirely uncorroborated. It was also stated that the prisoner, without any attempt at concealment, opened this box in the presence of the witness, and took out a pair of shoes. If he really had in the box at that time a large sum of money which had been feloniously obtained means of a forged instrument, was it likely that he would have seted in such a manner? It was incredible that under such circumstances be would have deposited it at all with a man of Mr. Silva's stamp, and without some special directions. He attempted no concealment, and it was noreasonable and impossible that he could have acted as he did under such circumstances. order to find the prisoner guilty the jury must have the money identified, or they must have such evidence as would lead to no other conclusion but that it came into his possession under was suffering from heart disease. I mean he would get the money. I was very near the timest which Beltran received transactions are paid by the shroff. I have no do not know where he was to get the money from, the money from the Bank. The evidence of the watchman of the Kinking showed that soon after that they were both on board the steamer ogether on the way to Macao, that they arrived at about 5.30; and there was evidence to show at about seven or eight o'clock the prisoner went to the house of da Silva, and left in his charge a locked bex which was afterwards found to contain notes to the amount of $17,750. De Silva had heard of the prisoner's arrest, and being uneasy about the responsibility attached to the enstedy of his box, he gave information to Mr. Pacheco, and the box was opened in the presence of the Administrator of Macao, when the sum stated was found inside. There was also bisfact that a few hours after this entensive fraud ipon the Chartered Bank, the prisoner, a man in humble circumstances, was found to be in possession of such a sum as $17,750 in Bank notes. Witness (closely examining the paper)-Yes, The Acting Attorney General asked the jury he gave me one like this. I had my head down whether, under such circumstances, the prisoner ought not to give some account of how such a sum of money came into his pessession. However, he said nothing whatever, and he gave not the slightest explanation of itatall. He thought that most extraordinary,

His Lordship-I think it would be an exceptional circumstances even for a shopkeeper in good circumstances to be carrying $17,000 about with him in this way. That, however, is a ques ion for the jury.

The Acting Attorney-General, in continuation, said that the opening scene is this case appeared to have taken place about the middle of July, when the prisoner went to consult a fortune teller at Mecao. They had also heard from da Silva that the prisoner was in Macao about the time stated by the fortune teller. If that fact stood alone it would tell very little, but when they found the prisoner was asking the fortune teller whether some one named Pedro would succond in getting certain money from a for ign Bank in Hongkong by means of some piece of paper, it spoke a good deal as to what had been going on. It spoke a great deal more when they considered in connection with subscapent avents -with the prisoner's connection with Heltran on the day the money was obtained from the Bank, the journey to Masso in company, and the prisoner's possession of that box containing $17,750 the same evening. There was no direct evidence, but there was strong oircumstantial evidence, and he (the Acting Attorney-General) thought there was ample, in the absence of any explanation on the part of the prisoner, to justify the jury in convicting. t was suggested by the counsel for the defence that perhaps someone had wilfully put the money in the prisoner's box; but had he called the least vidence to show that the box was ever in the ustody of anyone who could have put such a arge sum in it? He thought that if the jury took the whole case from the baginning, when the prisoner consulted the fortune teller, to the end, when the money was found in his box, they would find him guilty of the offence with which hé was charged

His Lordship summed up at some length, and doing so he said that perhaps the strongest oint which had been arged on behalf of the risoner was that as to whether there was any widence showing that it had been received by him either at Hongkong or Macao. If the jury were of opinion the money came into the prisener's possession at Macaothis court would have no jurisdiction to deal with the case. As to the fortune telling woman it was for the jury to consider whether her evidence was to be believed. Certainly this was a good advortisement for her, for she had made her prophecies come true. If the ury thought it was true, however, that the prisoner had put such questions to her, it certainly showed that he must have had some understanding with Pedro as to some money that was to be got from a foreign Bank. Mr. Lesch that the $17,750 found in the black box was whether the evidence did not show that that suspicious circumstances. Would the jury expect to find such a sum carried about by a man like such a house in that way with such a man as da da Craz was a likely man to be carrying $17.750 in notes in a box about Macao; but was it not Hongkong would be carrying about such a sum of money in that way? Then if the jary found the prisoner was in possession of this sum of money obtained in the manner alleged, there was the question of a guilty knowledge. It was for the jury to consider whether, unless he had amilty knowledge, the prisoner would have put the money in a box and left it at da Silva's house as he did. Then again as to the pointwhether the money, if the jury were satisfied it was received as alleged, was received at Hongkong or Macao. If it were transferred on the steamer, it was a British steamer, but if it were transferred at Macan the court had no jurisdiction. The prosecution alleged it was in Hongkoug, and it was for the jury to consider whether, under the circumstances, it was not more probable the money had been transferred at Hongkong than at Macao. What would be his object in receiving it at Macao ! Why should be not have received it in Hongkong? He gave no account of it in any way. The jury, in order to convict must be satisfied that $30,000 was obtained by Heltran, as stated, on a forged document, and that this $17,000 was part of that sum which the prisoner had received in Hongkong, and had taken to Macao with the intention of secreting it. If they came to that conclusion they would find the prisoner guilty. If they had reasonable doubt upon those points—if they thought it was a reasonable thing that he should be carrying this money about and depositing it as he did, or that he must have received the amount in Macao, they would find him not gailty. The jury retired to consider their verdict, and after having been absent from court eight minutes they returned a unanimous verdict of guilty. Sentence was deferred, and the Erselons wereadjourned to 11 s.m. to-morrow, when the sentences

Ought not such a startling discovery to lead to distrust of the Chinese staffs of all the Government Departments in the colony? Can Mr. Ackroyd or any other Government official confidently say that there are no more men like the late Chin Chew interpreter in the same department, or in the Supreme Court, or in any other department of the Government? Is it not probable, where one case like that comes to light, that there may be others which have not been unearthed? MR. PETER MAOLEAN AND CONSULAR REPORTS.

JUSTITIA.

Mr. Peter Maolean writes as follows in his circular dated Shanghai, 18th September:-Our China Consuls and the Cotton Magnates, Patus (Old) 527 of Lancashire are again at loggerheads. According to the former the moral obliquity of the British manufacturer and merchant continues beyond banning, beyond hope of redemption. According to the latter-'tis a sorry bird that "files its ain nest." In the eyes of the former the foreigner and the native are the concentrated essences of honesty, goodness and truth; whilst Laucashire shines forth stainless and bright to the mental vision of the latter. So, at present, stands the controversy; and a very pretty con-troversy it is, notwithstanding that the arguments on either side are not new. Indeed, they are becoming very tiresome in their reiteration. But on this occasion the Formosan Consul. by ON NEW YORK. means of six bits of native "tough, rough, honest, untearable and nuwearoutable homespuns' has added fresh fuel to the flame, and Lancachire, in the person of her Mr. Fielden, has boiled over. She "fails to see that it is any part of their (Consular Officers') duty to continually Or CALOUTTAdecry the quality of our goods," and the senti-ment is echoed by all who are practically interested in the trade. Moreover, there, are who consider such action to be wholly inexcusable, since, were information asked for where it could and would most igladly be furnished, the officers might find that a question has seldom less than two sides, and so be led to recognise the gross injustice done to the other side by their production of the one only in support of their annual stories. It is not said, nor is it even hinted that any suppressio vers has ever taken place, but the Reports sometimes have erred in stopping short of the whole truth, and often have their conclusions been absurd, untenable, and, to business men, food for ridicule. Mr. Spence, for instance trots out No. 6 sample as a "colourable imitation of P.M.C.D. sic) or some other well known American Sheeting."-" . Chinese homespun in great demand, called 'American because, to our shame be it said 'American." from the point of view of the Chinese dealer, why should England, so long as she holds most honourable position in the show, envy America her place amongst the excellent of the earth! Is it the fault of England that in certain districts of China her products are not preferred? And shall her sons repine knowing that for one district supplied by America they supply ten. that for one textile furnished by America the 'excellent." they furnish their dozens, all high up in the "excellent" list in their respective regions of consumption. And, again, how grand how blenching is Mr. Spence's characterization of the Laucashire textile—"rubbish." Did he know, before Mr. Fielden informed him, or had he forgotten the fact, that "considerable quantilien of coffins?" or that "filling in these cloths -is essential to sale?" and that such are manu- China Sugar Refining Company, Limited-$102 the 15th April, 1885. factured because of the want there is for them? -Truly, "where ignorance is bliss," etc. Oh Luson Sugar Refining Company, Limited-$68 Donald! striving hard to fold lasue. Demand has been very slack, and the dulness is not explained, nor fully accounted for by the space of time that usually lapses between the ficale of the settlements and the receipt of advices from the outports. At our principal dependencies, however, the prospects, by latest accounts, continued as hopeful, perhaps, as could be expected. Chilli has got rid of much of her superfluous water, and so has Manchuria, but both have suffered grievously, and, at Newchwang the foreign residents, fore-seeing the distress which must increase as the winter advances, have appointed a committee of relief and it is to be hoped that, even in these hard charged by Mr. A. Moir, superintendent of the times, there will be a generous response to their appeal for contributions.

TIENTSIN.

11th September. We have been without steamers for three days owing, it is supposed, to the northward bound fleet being detained by gales at Chefoo. There is no indication here of bad weather. The French Minister, M. Constans, and suite left for. Peking on the 9th; relations with Li Hung-chang said to be of the most amiable character. The Minister for Holland left yesterday for the capital. The German Minister remains here having important business to transact with the Vicercy. The Foreign representatives are gradually accepting the fact that the Chinese Foreign Office is in Tientsin. The river to Tung-chow is now quite navig able again and globe-trotters need not fear de tention. A month ago boats took eight days to go up. The floods are slowly subsiding heresbouts.
